

REVIEW

My Nude Valentine

Barebrush Artists on Exhibit
Rogue Space, Chelsea
February 10-13, 2011

Review by Daniel Maidman

Barebrush.com is a user-content-driven website devoted to art depicting the nude. From February 10-13, the site hosted its first "brick and mortar" art show, My Nude Valentine, at Rogue Space in Chelsea, New York. Work included in the show was derived from juror selections of drawings, paintings, and photographs submitted by members of the website; 49 artists were represented. The show replicated the feel of many art social networking sites - it was packed to the gills, artwork varied wildly in style and approach, and the curatorial theory was driven almost entirely by a commonality of content. As such, only the broadest overall conclusions can be drawn, chiefly, "Well, there's still a lot of interest in depicting the nude."

Subscribe to TheGreatNude.tv

Left: Angelique Moselle Price, Reflective Willingness

